How to Use the Cutter-Sanborn Table

1. Find the first few letters of the author's surname on the Cutter-Sanborn Table. Use only the bold face letter shown in the combination and the number next to it (i.e. A757 for Arnold, Margaret; K49 for Kimball, John; L676 for Lewis, Sinclair; S869 for Stoddard, Solomon.)

The following examples indicate how four books, all on the second World War, by four different authors (Arnold, Kimball, Lewis and Stoddard) would be marked — with 940.54 as the classification number; and A757, K49, L676 and S869 as the respective Cutter-Sanborn numbers.

940.54 A757	940.54 K49	940.54 L676	940.54 S869
----------------	---------------	----------------	----------------

2. Occasionally there will be no number that fits a name exactly. In that case use the preceding number. For example: Andrews, Helen would be under A566 (Andrews, E.) which is the preceding number; not under A567 (Andrews, J.) the following number.

3. When two authors share the same number, it is advisable to add a digit. A good number to select is 5, as there is then room on both sides for additional interpolation as necessary. For example: A book already in the collection by Richard Colby would be C686. A new book to be added to the same classification number by another author named Colby would need a different author number. A book by Simeon Colby could then be C6865. This leaves room for the insertion of additional authors between Richard and Simeon — using C6862, C6863 and C6864. (It is best to avoid using 1 and 9, if possible, since the use of either would mean going to a fifth figure when another author had to be inserted.) To accommodate a book by John Colby, it would be necessary to go to the previous number — which is C685. In this case it is wise to add a digit such as C6855, since an author beginning with Colbu would cause a conflict.

4. For shelving purposes, Cutter-Sanborn numbers within any given class should be considered as a decimal arrangement. For example: C685, C6855, C686, C6862, etc. (Not C685, C686, C6855, C6862.)

5. A work mark is used to distinguish different titles by the same author. This is a letter taken from the first key word in the title. Thus: A Writer's Notebook by Maugham would be designated M449w; and Of Human Bondage would be M449o.

In the case of voluminous authors, the use of two letters for the work mark is advisable. Thus: Dickens's David Copperfield would be D548da and Dombey and Son D548do. (Note: A lower case letter or letters is used for the work mark, rather than a capital letter. It is imperative that a script l be used so that there will be no confusion with the number 1.)

In the case of books in series, by the same author, all in the same classification and beginning with the same word — such as Zaidenberg's How to Draw . . . — it is advisable to use key words for the work mark. For example: How to Draw Cartoons would be Z21hc; and How to Draw People would be Z21hp. (This method avoids excessively long work marks, such as h, ho, how, howt.)

6. The use of zero should be avoided, because it is easily confused with the letter O. That is why there are no zeros used in the table.

7. Names beginning with Mc, M' and Mac are all treated as though they were spelled Mac. Thus McClellan would be M126 and M'Clintock would be M127.

8. The Cutter-Sanborn Tables are particularly well suited to fiction. Books by authors with similar surnames are more easily located on the shelf if there is a number on the spine. For example: Low would be L912 and Lowe L913.

9. Very often a main entry is under title, e.g. periodicals, anonymous works, government publications, almanacs, encyclopedias, etc. In this case the Cutter-Sanborn number is taken from the first word in the title (exclusive of articles.) An example would be S888 for The Story of the Wise Men; World Almanac would be W927. (There is, of course, no work mark.)

10. In order that all biographies of the same person will stand together on the shelf, the Cutter-Sanborn number is taken from the name of the biographee, not the author. All biographies of Lincoln would be under L736. The work mark in this case is not from the title but is the first letter of the author's surname. Thus: Charnwood's biography of Lincoln would be L736c. When there are many books about a person, the use of a second letter is sometimes necessary. For example: Current's biography of Lincoln would be L736cu.
